SAMANTHA ROTHMAN

Fairview Farm and Flowers

Summit Speech School's Annual Spring Benefit started as a flower show 27 years ago. We will be honoring our roots at this year's luncheon by featuring a floral design presentation by botanist and floral designer Samantha Rothman, owner of Fairview Farm and Flowers.

Samantha grew up in between landscapes; having a father from Brooklyn and a mother from a rural farm community in Kansas, translated into understanding both the people and lands of two seemingly different worlds. The wide open spaces of prairie, contrasted with the deep forests of the mid-Atlantic both influenced Samantha's career path.

After studying plant ecology at Smith College, she went on to the Yale School of Forestry and Environmental Studies. After leaving Connecticut, Sam realized that working with people and plants, together, was far better than working alone in the woods. After completing her graduate education, she returned home to Morristown where she served for nearly a decade on the Town of Morristown Environmental Commission and co-founded the non-profit Grow It Green-Morristown, which operates New Jersey's largest public school garden and an innovative eco-park/community garden.

In addition, she and her husband purchased a long neglected Gilded Age mansion and grounds called "Fairview" and began transforming the property into a model for sustainable landscape and permaculture design. Through Sam's love of plants and flowers, "Fairview Farm and Flowers" was born, specializing in unique floral designs, locally grown blooms, and opportunities for creativity through their flower design classes.
